

Hey Everyone! November 6, 2009

How are you? I'm back in Mazatlan now, but it was so good to be home most of this past month (even though it snowed on me). I really got to relax some and see a lot of friends and family! I feel so recharged and refreshed now and ready to take on this next year!

NIGHT OF PRAYER

On the 31st of October in Mazatlan this year, instead of celebrating Halloween, a bunch of local churches got together and organized a huge night of worship and prayer for the city. Leading up to this event, many of those churches had spent 40 days fasting and praying for Mazatlan and Mexico. I was so thankful that I got back here in time to attend, and I was SOOO BLOWN AWAY by the outcome!!!! There were over 1000 people there, 9 different churches' pastors directly participated by praying or sharing from the stage, and many more helped behind the scenes and attended the event. I have never seen or heard of so many pastors from the city getting together and doing anything together!!!! One of the local pastors led all of us in a time of repentance for all of the sins that have been committed in the city. Imagine 1000+ people on their knees crying out to the Lord for forgiveness in a very public place in your city and maybe you'll start to understand how significant this event was! Several different pastors came up in between songs and prayed for different things like: the government, the president, finances, holiness, peace, families, transformed lives, and salvation. At the end, they did an altar call and over 30 people accepted Christ for the first time!!! After attending this event, I decided that this is something I always want to be a part of no matter where I am!!

BEING HOME

I spent most of the past month in Minnesota. It was so good to see many of you and catch up on your lives. I love hearing from you and knowing how you are doing and what is going on in your lives! Also, for the last few days of my vacation time, my mom and I drove to Colorado and I got to see a lot of my dad's family and a few friends. The highlight was probably playing dress-up with my younger cousins and letting them put pink highlights in my hair (don't worry-- they were the one-time wash out kind ☺)!

Then I flew to Phoenix on my way back to Mazatlan and got to visit my brother at college for a day. It was so good to get to see him, even if it was only for a day.

PRAYER REQUESTS

- for me to settle back into Mazatlan, the base, and my life here.
- for this DTS to get everything out of their time here and raise all of their money for outreach. (They're going to South Africa and Mexico City.)
- for the local pastors to continue to work together and for this revival that we've seen start to continue.

Once again, it was so good to be home and see many of you, but it is also good to be back in Mazatlan! Thank you for everything!

Dios les bendiga,
